

This is okay because it could harm other people and you cannot just trust random websites on the internet.

This is okay so you can let them know it's not true and private message them is better than telling them publicly so you don't embarrass them in front of the class.

Scenario 2

Someone in your class shares an article that you know is not true. You decide to message them privately and let them know.

I'm not sure if this is okay because you might think your message is fine but they may be bored or unhappy and read your message in a totally different way. It might be best to speak

I'm not sure if this is okay or not because it depends how you tell them. It is best to send a private message so they are not embarrassed.
